Transfers to Other Colleges and Universities

In the original International Student Retention and Graduation report (released January 20, 2014), it was noted that, “contrary to initial expectations, only 23.9% of students who were not retained enrolled at another U.S. institution after leaving Miami.” Additional information provided by International Student and Scholars Services indicates that international student transfers to other institutions are higher than initially reported.

On average, over the past three cohorts, 59.7% of international students who leave Miami by their junior year transfer to another institution. The transfer-out rate has dropped from a high of 85.0% for the 2009 cohort to 51.9% for the 2011 cohort. The majority of international students who leave Miami for another institution transfer to 4-year U.S. institutions, although some transfer to 2-year institutions or foreign institutions. Approximately one-third of the institutions are private, while the remaining institutions are public. The full list of updated institutions and transfer-out rates are provided in the updated Appendix B (see page 2).

Data Sources
Transfer-out enrollment information for international students is based on two data sources: 1) The National Student Clearinghouse, which tracks enrollment at U.S. institutions only. Because the Clearinghouse tracks students through their social security number, transfer information for international students, who often do not have a valid SSN, is limited. 2) Student submission of admissions letters to Miami University’s International Students and Scholars Services (ISSS). Students who indicate that they will be transferring to another institution are asked to provide ISSS with a copy of the admission letter to their new institution.
